

HIREPATHS™
Your Kids. Endless Career Options.

CAREER
BINGO
2022 Edition

- Go to HirePaths.com/profile and explore the career stories.
- Each box on the bingo card below has a missing name or other word. Write in the answer, then color in the box.
- When you have five colored boxes in a row (horizontally, vertically or diagonally), raise your hand and yell BINGO!

HINT: The missing words in each column start with the letter at the top!

B

I

N

G

O

_____ Stelk worked at Walmart and learned valuable skills that started her career in banking.

___ Manager Channing Dionisopoulos overcame a fear of heights to become a pilot and learn about the aviation industry.

Brooke McDonnell, BSN, RN, manages primary care _____ at Stormont Vail.

Jessica _____ didn't know there were so many different jobs at Textron Aviation until she began working there.

Paving foreman _____ Mares-Salazar knew he wanted to work in construction while he was still in high school.

This woman who works in aviation had a mother who taught her not to be afraid.
Pili _____

Jaiden Weixelman was able to take _____ to Automotive Technology in high school to help launch her career as a technician.

Early childhood educator Kristin Jenkins met her mentor in Lincoln, _____.

Ag Service Technician Adam _____ says a good mechanic can't be afraid to fail.

Stetson Shook became the _____ of his own cattle company while still in high school.

_____ County Community College grad Kristin Mallon says her teacher Matthew Galbraith was phenomenal at teaching her how to weld.

_____ Kansas, resident Dala Loomer is now living her lifelong dream of becoming a teacher.

FREE SPACE

Will Henry learned to be a _____ as an apprentice with G. Thomas Jewelers in Manhattan.

MRI Technologist Ajala Anavberokhai wanted to be the next _____ when she was a child, but after being a medic in the Army Reserves, she started her career in radiology.

Nurse Marley _____ first became interested in health care in the sixth grade when her grandfather had lung cancer.

Commercial Driving _____ David John previously served in the Marines.

Seth _____ works as a heavy equipment mechanic for Foley Equipment in Salina.

Mortician Gwendelrae Hicks calls herself a science _____. She took every science class she could in high school.

Data _____ Analyst Andre Connor suffered an injury in the Army, which led him to switch careers to work in IT.

Executive Chef Kati _____ originally wanted to become a pro basketball player before finding her calling in the restaurant industry.

Nathan Brown studied in the _____ and Network Technology program at Manhattan Area Technical College before landing his job at Networks Plus.

Hunter Dean got started in health care after earning his Certified _____ Assistant license while still in high school.

Pratt Science Teacher Joy Schmidt had many struggles in college that left her with a low _____. She turned her life around and now teaches her students that failure is a part of life.

Cody Clancy is participating in his company's crane _____ training program.

B I N G O

BANA Stelk worked at Walmart and learned valuable skills that started her career in banking.	IT Manager Channing Dionisopoulos overcame a fear of heights to become a pilot and learn about the aviation industry.	Brooke McDonnell, BSN, RN, manages primary care NURSES at Stormont Vail.	Jessica GOOD didn't know there were so many different jobs at Textron Aviation until she began working there.	Paving foreman OMAR Mares-Salazar knew he wanted to work in construction while he was still in high school.
This woman who works in aviation had a mother who taught her not to be afraid. Pili BARKER	Jaiden Weixelman was able to take INTRODUCTION to Automotive Technology in high school to help launch her career as a technician.	Early childhood educator Kristin Jenkins met her mentor in Lincoln, NEBRASKA.	Ag Service Technician Adam GIERHAN says a good mechanic can't be afraid to fail.	Stetson Shook became the OWNER of his own cattle company while still in high school.
BUTLER County Community College grad Kristin Mallon says her teacher Matthew Galbraith was phenomenal at teaching her how to weld.	INDEPENDENCE, Kansas, resident Dala Loomer is now living her lifelong dream of becoming a teacher.	FREE SPACE	Will Henry learned to be a GOLDSMITH as an apprentice with G. Thomas Jewelers in Manhattan.	MRI Technologist Ajala Anavberokhai wanted to be the next OPRAH when she was a child, but after being a medic in the Army Reserves, she started her career in radiology.
Nurse Marley BAUM first became interested in health care in the sixth grade when her grandfather had lung cancer.	Commercial Driving INSTRUCTOR David John previously served in the Marines.	Seth NELSON works as a heavy equipment mechanic for Foley Equipment in Salina.	Mortician Gwendelrae Hicks calls herself a science GEEK. She took every science class she could in high school.	Data OPERATIONS Analyst Andre Connor suffered an injury in the Army, which led him to switch careers to work in IT.
Executive Chef Kati BUTRICO originally wanted to become a pro basketball player before finding her calling in the restaurant industry.	Nathan Brown studied in the INFORMATION and Network Technology program at Manhattan Area Technical College before landing his job at Networks Plus.	Hunter Dean got started in health care after earning his Certified NURSING Assistant license while still in high school.	Pratt Science Teacher Joy Schmidt had many struggles in college that left her with a low GPA. She turned her life around and now teaches her students that failure is a part of life.	Cody Clancy is participating in his company's crane OPERATOR training program.